DETAILED ACTION

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

1. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

2. Claims 1-18 rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Cordier et al (US 4,437,651).

Cordier et al disclose a method for manufacturing a cooling element to be used in a furnace, the cooling element comprising a housing, in which there forms a channel for circulating fluid, a lining element (12) made of fireproof material. The housing and lining element including a mean for connecting them together (grooves 10 and 11). The lining element can move in vertical direction with respect to the housing (figure 1). The lining element arranging a bracket-like edge part that fits in the groove provided in the housing. The groove is arranged in the housing from the groove bottom towards the surface of the housing. The groove is positioned in the vertical position (figures).

Cordier et al fails to teach the housing is made of copper and the dimensions of the groove.

Art Unit: 1725

However, Cordier et al discloses the housing is made of iron, in which iron is a highly conductive material. Therefore, substituting iron with copper would have been obvious to an ordinary skill in the art, since both materials are highly conductive and choosing one over the other would have been merely a design choice.

Furthermore, the dimensions to the groove would have been obvious to an ordinary skill in the art, since this depends on the size of the liner to place therein. Therefore, the size of the groove is dependent to the type of liners.
